ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Since the coming into force of the Cullen Couture Agreement in 1978, when Ottawa and Quebec signed a bilateral framework agreement allowing the province to welcome newcomers to the province, all of the provinces have concluded similar agreements.

In 1996, Manitoba became the second province when it signed the Canada-Manitoba Immigration Agreement. This paved the way for the province to set its own immigration policies. Ontario was the last province to follow suit, nearly 20 years later. In the not-too-distant future, we may witness another similar program promoting immigration to Canada's rural communities and participating provinces.

There are now a multitude of provincial nominee programs and sub-streams, along with Quebec, which offer employers and individual skilled worker candidates alike, permanent immigration options to Canada.

This work arose from what we believe is a need to have a one-stop handbook outlining permanent immigration options for employers and intending skilled workers in the provinces.

This work is therefore suitable for immigration practitioners, government, employers as well as individual applicants to Canada. Students and researchers will no doubt find this eBook useful as well.

This eBook could not be made without the invaluable contribution from an extensive, competent and hard-working team at www.immigration.ca and the Canadian Citizenship & Immigration Resource Center (CCIRC) Inc. I wish to thank all of you who contributed immeasurably. In particular, I would like to individually thank Mohanad Amari, Gareth Butler, Maria Parau, Magali Desjardins, Angele Zakarian, Vanessa Popescu and Cassandra Blouin. Thank you all for your outstanding efforts.

Introduction

Under a shared jurisdiction between Ottawa and the provinces, Canada operates a two-tiered immigration system, offering programs for skilled workers, at both federal and provincial levels.

Through a network of Provincial Nominee Programs (PNP), almost all of Canada's ten provinces and three territories can nominate skilled worker candidates for admission to Canada with the specific skills required by their local economies. Successful candidates who receive a provincial nomination can then apply for Canadian permanent residence through federal immigration authorities. This is an important component of all provincial programs.

Provincial immigration programs will account for 55,000 newcomers (skilled and business), towards Canada's 2018 annual levels and 61,000 in 2019. Quebec will welcome 30,000 economic immigrants this year.

Provincial immigration programs offer Canadian employers an important retention tool to recruit and retain skilled worker foreign nationals. Many qualified individual applicants can likewise find a strategic benefit by directly applying into a provincial immigration program.

Whether an employer or an individual applicant, accessing one of Canada's provincial programs as a skilled worker, requires discipline, organization and quite often, punctuality as programs quickly open and close.

Some PNPs target broad industries with labour shortages, while others will drill down to specific occupations where employers face challenges to find Canadian candidates.

Often, provincial streams open for a specific allocation of applications on a periodic basis, and close very quickly. Others update lists of target occupations several times throughout the year, bringing certain occupations into the immigration spotlight that were previous not in-demand.

While the requirements for a skilled worker to qualify and apply for a PNP are different depending on the province, each PNP has at least one stream that operates under the federal Express Entry immigration system. Here, provinces nominate candidates who have profiles in the federal Express Entry Pool. Nominated candidates score 600 Comprehensive Ranking System points, effectively guaranteeing an Invitation to Apply in the following Express Entry draw, which takes place on average, every two weeks.

Quebec is the only province that manages its own fully integrated immigration program and has the exclusive responsibility of choosing immigrants wishing to settle there. As is the case with provincial programs, the role of the federal government is largely limited to conducting background and health verifications and issuing Canadian permanent residence visas.

The call to action for employers and individual candidates is clear. For candidates who do not meet federal level requirements, consider a provincial program. Consider the possibility that one of Canada's provinces may require a candidate with your skills and experience.

At a regional level, Canada also operates the Atlantic Immigration Pilot. This employer-led program aims to help a few thousand skilled worker immigrants per year, settle in the Atlantic provinces of Nova Scotia, Newfoundland & Labrador, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Finally, provincial immigration programs may often complement federal temporary work programs, permitting the early entry of employees, in a wide range of industries. For example, technology workers in 14 occupations can be admitted to Canada under a temporary work permit in 30-days through the Global Talent Stream. There are a number of other best practice options under temporary federal work programs, that need to be considered, in conjunction with provincial immigration programs.

This eBook presents a summary of immigration programs offered by Canada's provinces, for skilled workers. We did not include information on specific targeted occupations as demand occupation lists are regularly updated/outdated and can be found under the Provincial Immigration section of www.immigration.ca.

Alberta Immigrant Nominee Program

Alberta is one of Canada's three Prairie provinces, located in Western Canada. It is one of the fastest growing provinces of the country and home to two of the country's major urban centers, Calgary and Edmonton. Alberta's landscape varies from towering mountains to glacial lakes, from vast boreal forests to fertile prairies and desert badlands. The province's natural resource portfolio includes natural gas, oil, coal, minerals and the famous Alberta oil sands, making Alberta Canada's energy province.

The Alberta Immigrant Nominee Program \(AINP\) is designed for individuals who possess the skills and abilities to fill labor shortages in Alberta. It is managed by the Alberta government in conjunction with IRCC. The AINP accepts skilled worker applications under the Alberta Opportunity Stream and under the Express Entry system.

The Alberta Opportunity Stream

The Alberta Opportunity Stream launched in June 2018, replaced the Employer-Driven Stream and the Strategic Recruitment Stream. It is designed to simplify the AINP application process, reduce waiting times and make the system fairer for candidates and employers.

Eligibility Requirements

The selection requirements comprise six criteria:

1. Immigration Residency and Work Permit Requirements

At the time when the application is submitted and assessed:

British Columbia Provincial Nominee Program

British Columbia Provincial Nominee Program

British Columbia is Canada's westernmost province, defined by the Pacific coastline and mountain ranges, and home of Canada's third largest city, Vancouver. The British Columbia Provincial Nominee Program \(BC PNP\) targets individuals who meet the province's labour market needs and who intend to settle permanently in British Columbia.

The BC PNP accepts skilled worker applications under two pathways: Skills Immigration and Express Entry BC, each with their own sub-streams.

Work experience in the province of B.C. is not required. However, the candidate must hold a validated offer of full-time indeterminate employment from a British Columbia employer, except for candidates under the EEBC International Post Graduate stream.

An advantage of applying under the British Columbia Express Entry stream is the priority processing given on the permanent residence application.

The BC PNP Tech Pilot

The BC PNP Tech Pilot allows British Columbia immigration officials to expedite the processing of immigration candidates for in-demand technology occupations. Through weekly draws, invitations are issued to candidates with work experience in one of 29 eligible occupations in the B.C. technology sector.

The BC PNP Tech Pilot prioritises technology sector applications under B.C. immigration streams. Candidates must still meet the basic requirements of an applicable British Columbia immigration category, including a minimum one-year job offer from a B.C. employer.

Categories include Skilled Workers, Healthcare Professionals, International Graduates, International Post-Graduates and Entry-Level and Semi-Skilled Workers.

BC PNP Tech Pilot: Key Features

1. Dedicated concierge service

Technology employers receive access to a concierge service that includes a guaranteed next business day assignment of applications in one of the outlined occupations.

2. Weekly invitations for tech candidates

Tech employers are given timely access to qualified individuals in the 29 key tech occupations.

3. Priority processing

Dedicated BC PNP Tech Team and next business day assignment of tech applications in the 29 in-demand occupations.

4. Focused outreach and engagement

BC PNP sessions and events tailored for the tech sector, including one-on-one employer support.

- Interested candidates in BC PNP must register via BCPNP Online system.
- It operates under a points-based system which gives candidates a registration score that determines whether they may be invited to apply. The score is based on a number of factors — such as level of education, years of direct work experience and a B.C. employment offer — that reflect an individual's ability to succeed in the labour market and contribute to the provincial economy.
- Certain categories do not need registration: SI and EEBC Healthcare Professionals and International Post Graduates.

2. Invitation to apply

- Highest-scoring profiles will receive an invitation to apply for a nomination application.

3. Application

- After receiving an invitation, the candidate must submit a complete application online and pay the $700 application fee

- There is a 30-day deadline to submit the application.

4. Nomination

- Approved candidates will receive nomination enabling them to apply for permanent residence to the federal government IRCC.

5. IRCC application

- Following health, criminality and security checks, the approved candidates will receive a permanent resident visa.

Manitoba Provincial Nominee Program

Manitoba Provincial Nominee Program

Manitoba is one of Canada's prairie provinces and its economy relies heavily on agriculture, tourism, energy and forestry. Located at the "heart of Canada", Manitoba is known for its warmth towards newcomers and is a place where more than 200 cultures live together in harmony. Its capital city, Winnipeg, is a world-class city that offers affordable housing and education options.

Manitoba in 1996, was the first Canadian province to establish its own provincial immigration program. The Manitoba Provincial Nominee Program \(MNP\) selects candidates with skills and experiences needed in the local labour market. It operates under two streams, each with its own two sub-categories.

Skilled Workers in Manitoba Stream

The Skilled Worker in Manitoba Stream (SWM) is based on the specific needs of Manitoba employers. SWM targets foreign-trained workers with the required skills and nominates them for Canada permanent residence. The stream prioritizes candidates with a strong attachment to Manitoba, with two pathways: Work Experience and Employer direct Recruitment.

 - minimum of 6 months if the job is on the In-Demand Occupations list
 - minimum of 12 months if the job is NOT on the In-Demand Occupations list

- Demonstrate ability and intent to reside in Manitoba.

Employer Direct Recruitment Pathway

This pathway is for applicants from overseas with job offers from approved Manitoba employers.

Skilled Worker Overseas Stream

It includes both a dedicated Canada Express Entry Pathway and a direct provincial pathway.

Manitoba Express Entry Pathway

This sub-stream is intended for international candidates eligible under another MPNP stream, who also meet Express Entry criteria and have an active Express Entry profile. - At least one post-secondary program of at least one-year duration.
- Demonstrate the ability and intent to settle in Manitoba AND demonstrate a close connection to the province by having a family member or friend who has been living in Manitoba for at least one year or by having a valid invitation to apply from MPNP
- Demonstrate sufficient settlement funds.

Human Capital Pathway

This sub-stream targets international skilled workers with skills, training and experience in one of Manitoba's In-Demand Occupations. Candidates must demonstrate potential to find employment soon after they arrive in Manitoba.

Prince Edward Island Provincial Nominee Program

One of Canada's maritime provinces, Prince Edward Island is the smallest province in both land area and population. It is often called the "Birthplace of Confederation" because of the Charlottetown Conference in 1864, when the confederation took place. The island's beautiful landscape has inspired the classic novel of Anne of Green Gables, and had made it a popular tourist destination for relaxation. Its economy relies heavily on agriculture, tourism and fishery.

The Prince Edward Island Provincial Nominee Program \(PEI PNP\) expedites immigration to Canada for individuals and their families who meet provincial criteria in support of four initiatives: increased business and economic development, increased supply of skilled workers, increased population and achievement of provincial demographic, social and cultural objectives.

Prince Edward Island Labour Impact Category

This category targets individuals who possess the skills and experience to successfully establish in the province of PEI. It is divided into four streams: skilled workers in PEI, skilled workers outside PEI, critical workers and international graduates.

Skilled Workers in PEI

If invited to apply for nomination, the candidate will have 60 days to submit a complete application (completed forms and supporting documents) to the Office of Immigration of PEI. A $300 application fee is due at this time.

If the application is approved, a Certificate of Nomination is issued. With the nomination from PEI the applicant can then apply through IRCC for Permanent Residency with the nomination certificate.

Prince Edward Island Express Entry Stream

PEI's Express Entry category operates by considering candidates already in the federal Express Entry Pool for a provincial nomination.

Such a nomination adds 600 points to a candidate's CRS score and effectively guarantees an Invitation to Apply for Canadian immigration.

There are two pathways to immigrate under Express Entry category: candidates with a job offer and candidates without a job offer. Priority will be given to candidates who are currently living and working in PEI.

To apply for a provincial nomination from PEI, candidates already in the federal Express Entry Pool must complete an Expression of Interest in the PEI PNP system. This profile will be active for six months and will be ranked against a grid of six factors: age, language, education, work experience, employment and adaptability.

If invited to apply for nomination, the candidate will have 60 days to submit a complete application (completed forms and supporting documents) to the Office of Immigration of PEI. A $300 application fee is due at this time.

If the application is approved, a Certificate of Nomination is issued. With the nomination from PEI the applicant will then have to apply through IRCC for permanent residence with the nomination certificate.

Quebec Skilled Worker Program

Quebec Skilled Worker Program

A mixture of Europe and North America, Quebec is the largest of Canada's provinces, located in the eastern part of the country. Its economy relies heavily on natural resources, although industries such as information and communication, biotechnology, pharmaceutical also play a major role in making Quebec an economic power within Canada.

Following the Canada-Quebec Accord, a legal agreement concerning the division of power related to immigration issues between the province of Quebec and the federal government, Quebec has exclusive responsibility to manage its own fully integrated immigration program.

Foreign nationals wishing to settle permanently in Quebec must undergo a two-step immigration process: first, they must be selected by the Ministry of Immigration, Diversity and Inclusion (MIDI), Quebec's immigration authority. Selected applicants will receive a Quebec Certificate of Selection (CSQ).

Then, an approved CSQ holder must file an application with Canadian federal immigration authorities, whose role in evaluating a Quebec application for permanent residence is mainly limited to issues of health and criminality.

Interested individuals may apply under Quebec Skilled Worker Program \(QSWP\), or under its sub-category, the Quebec Experience Program \(PEQ\).

Quebec Skilled Worker Program

Starting August 2018, this program operates under an expression of interest system, implemented by MIDI in an effort to streamline their application procedures. It offers an opportunity to obtain permanent residence to individuals who possess the skills, education and experience necessary for a successful establishment in Canada's francophone province. As of this publication, Quebec has not yet conducted its first draw.

Eligibility Requirements

To qualify under the QSWP, candidates must pass the minimum thresholds under the selection grid imposed by the province.

For a single candidate, the employability threshold is of 43 points. Here, the credentials considered are the candidate's age, education, work experience, visits and family in Quebec, language proficiency, potential job offer. Then, additional points are awarded for existence of children and financial autonomy. A selection cut-off score of 50 points is required in order to qualify under the QSWP.

When a candidate has a spouse/de facto spouse, certain of his or her credentials are also considered, such as age, education, French proficiency. The cut-off scores are higher, namely 52 points under the employability threshold and 59 points under the selection threshold.

Application process

1. Candidates submit an online expression of interest (EOI) profile to the MIDI, under the new Arrima Portal.
 - The portal remains open year-round.

- Submission is free of charge.
 - Anyone who is above 18 years old may submit an expression of interest.
2. Profiles enter into an Expression of Interest bank, where they are ranked against each other and are valid for 12-months.
 - The selection of candidates from the EOI bank will be based on criteria defining the person's profile in terms of employability and contribution to the vitality of the French language.
 - Although MIDI has published the ranking criteria, the scores attached to each factor have not been released yet.
 - MIDI publishes lists of High Demand Occupations and Areas of Training that could weigh considerably in the assessment.
 3. Quebec will conduct periodic draws, where the highest-ranking candidates will receive an Invitation to Apply (ITA) for a Quebec Certificate of Selection under the Quebec Skilled Worker Program.
 - Candidates receiving an invitation have 90 days to submit a full application under a secure space in the Mon Projet Portal.
 4. Approved candidates who receive a selection certificate (CSQ) may then apply for Canadian permanent residence.

The MIDI has implemented a system of priority processing of skilled worker applications to be carried out in the following order:

1. Quebec Experience category;
2. Validated employment offer;
3. Residents of Quebec who have full-time work experience of at least 6 months.

Quebec Experience Program (PEQ)

The Quebec Experience Program \(PEQ\) is a sub-category of the skilled workers program, and is considered a simplified fast-track process leading to permanent residence for two categories of applicants. Eligibility Requirements for international students

For international students to be eligible under PEQ, they must:

Students may submit their application for permanent residence from within Québec six months before completing their program of study or maximum 36 months after the completion of their program.

The CSQ is issued to the student upon confirmation of successful completion of an approved program of stud, enabling them to apply for permanent residence to the federal government.

Eligibility requirements for foreign workers

To qualify under the PEQ Temporary Workers, the applicant must:

- Reside temporarily in Quebec as a temporary foreign worker or as a participant in an approved work-holiday program and be employed full-time, in full compliance with the visa conditions.
- Possess an intermediate-advanced knowledge of oral French, proven by one the options described above.

- Prove that they have been employed full-time in Quebec for a period of 12 months in the 24 months that precede the submission of the application.

 - Full-time employment constitutes a minimum of 30 hours of paid work per week.
 - Part-time work, self-employment or business ownership does not qualify under PEQ.

Yukon Nominee Program

Yukon Nominee Program

Yukon is Canada's smallest territory and home to the country's highest peak, Mount Logan. The capital, Whitehorse, is the territory's only city and it offers its residents a very active lifestyle, with many opportunities for hiking, kayaking and the annual Yukon Quest sled dog race.

The Yukon Nominee Program \(YNP\) targets individuals wishing to settle in Yukon and become permanent residents through one of its skilled workers streams: skilled workers, critical impact workers and Express Entry.

This stream is employer-driven and designed to assist Yukon employers, sectors or governments to identify and nominate potential qualified immigrants to fill positions that cannot be filled by territorial or national labour markets.

In order to apply under this program, the applicant must:

1. The employer and foreign worker complete and submit all required forms for the YNP.

3. If approved, the foreign national is assessed.
4. If approved, the foreign national becomes a territory nominee.
5. The nominee applies for work permit and for permanent residence through IRCC.
6. The nominee relocates to Yukon and works for the employer while the PR application is being processed.
7. Once health, criminality and security checks are cleared, the PR visa is issued and the nominee becomes a permanent resident of Canada.

Atlantic Immigration Pilot

Atlantic Immigration Pilot

In addition to the provincial programs, Canada's federal government operates the Atlantic Immigration Pilot (AIP) in partnership with Nova Scotia, Newfoundland & Labrador, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

As an employer-driven program, the AIP requires interested candidates to hold a job offer from an eligible employer before they can apply under one of three programs: Atlantic High-Skilled Program, Atlantic Intermediate-Skilled Program and Atlantic International Graduate Program.

The work experience, education, and job offer a candidate needs will depend on whether they are applying as a worker or an international student graduate. The other requirements are the same for both programs.

permit first, the candidate needs to commit to applying for permanent residence within 90 days of the temporary application being submitted.

Under all streams, employers must complete an Endorsement Application for each candidate able to fill an existing vacancy.

Conclusion

Canada promotes a number of skilled worker immigration programs, which are designed to enhance specific provincial economic objectives.

Provincial programs were created because, in a vast country such as Canada, the economic needs of one province can be significantly different from those of another.

For employers, Canada's federal immigration programs may not address specific provincial labour shortages. Provincial programs often provide more flexibility to meet those requirements.

For candidates, who may not qualify through the broader requirements of federal programs, provincial programs that target specific skillsets may be an excellent alternative.

Becoming aware of specific provincial options could prove to be a reliable strategy towards your Canada immigration project.

2018 Guide to

CANADA PROVINCIAL IMMIGRATION PROGRAMS FOR SKILLED WORKERS

Under a shared jurisdiction between Ottawa and the provinces, Canada operates a two-tiered immigration system, offering programs at both federal and provincial levels.

Through an array of Provincial Nominee Programs (PNP), almost all of Canada's ten provinces and three territories can nominate candidates for admission to Canada with the specific skillsets required by their local economies. Successful candidates who receive a provincial nomination, can then apply for Canadian permanent residence, through federal immigration authorities.
